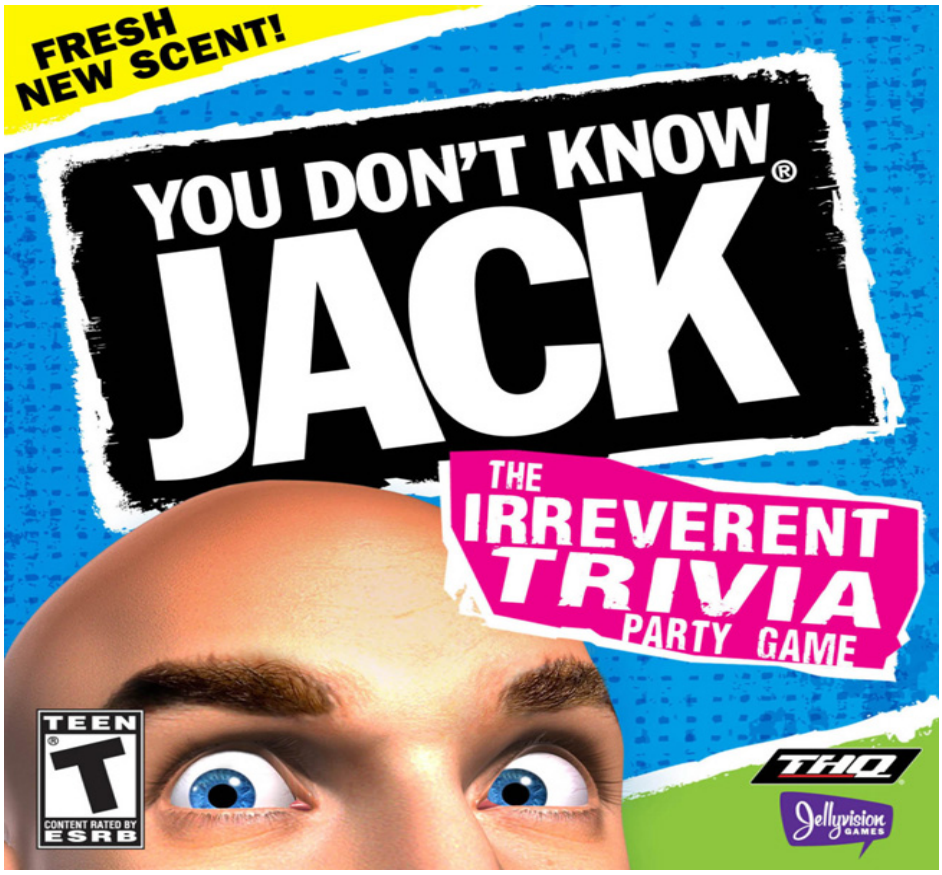
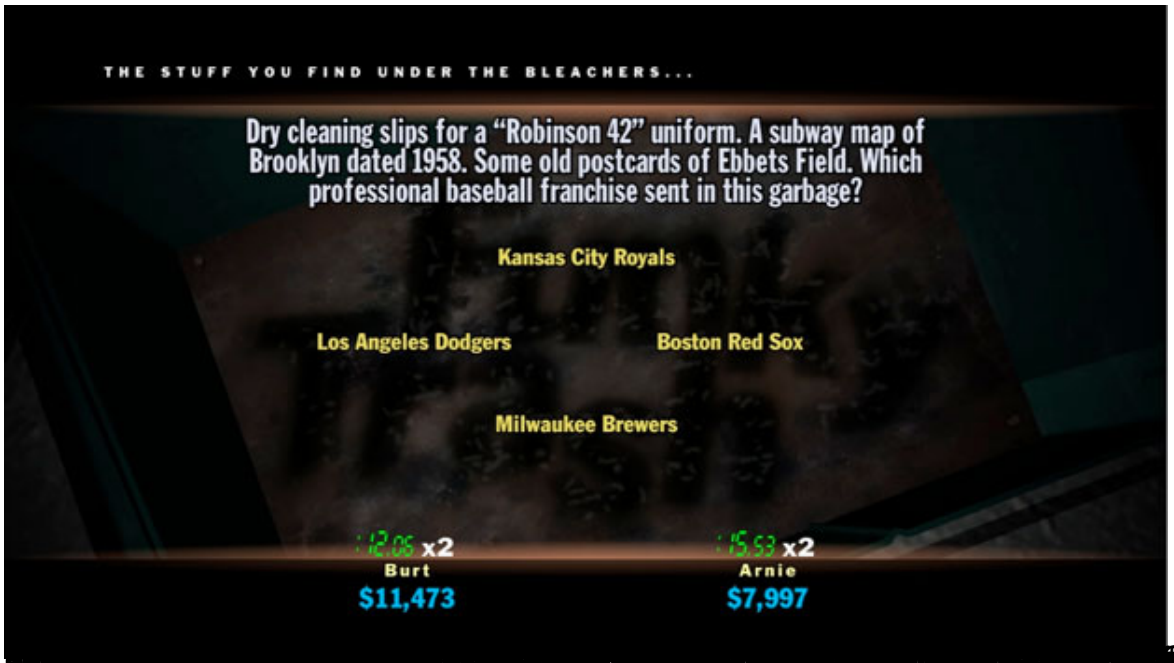
Written by Erik Kubik, kube00
Friday, 23 December 2011 06:00



I have fond memories of the You Don't Know Jack games from the mid 1990s. I have to say things haven't changed much. If you have to own one trivia game this year... No wait... If you have to have one trivia game on any console you owe it to yourself to pick up You Dont Know Jack.

{loadposition google}

THQ has done an excellent job and the game is very close to the original that Sierra did. Probably the most appealing thing about the game is how much it dogs the player. The host, Cookie Masterson is also ribbing players about what answer they pick or what they do in general. Much like the original this keeps the game interesting. Best of all anyone can pick up and play this game. Some of the questions are tough. The ability to screw the other player which forces them to pick an answer quickly or be penalized, keeps players on their toes.



THE STUFF YOU FIND UNDER THE BLEACHERS...
Dry cleaning slips for a "Robinson 42" uniform. A subway map of Brooklyn dated 1958. Some old postcards of Ebbets Field. Which professional baseball franchise sent in this garbage?
Kansas City Royals
Los Angeles Dodgers
Boston Red Sox
Milwaukee Brewers
:12.06 x2
Burt
$11,473
:15.53 x2
Arnie
$7,997

[redacted]